Great Bridge At Fulton Dedicated By Many Officials

Ceremonies, Boat Races Held at Historic Site At Fulton

BIG CROWD ATTENDS Dwight Blackwood Gives Dedictory Address at Ceremony

The oldest ferry in Arkansas passed into history Tuesday at the dedication with elaborate ceremonies of the new million dollar toll bridge at Fulton, Ark.—the costliest structure spanning the Red river.

The citizens of two counties and state officials came together above the brassy waters of Red river to formally open this newest link in the gateway to the Southwest.

While rain, fell intermittently, a great throng stood on historic ground about the speakers' platform at the foot of the bridge while leaders of the movement, which ended with the construction of the span, described the history and the inevitable future of the bridge.

Heralding the progress of Arkansas through the supplement of a great bridge for a time worn ferry, Dwight H. Blackwood, chairman of the Arkansas highway commission, delivered the dedicatory address.

As the highway commissioner walked from his seat on the stand to the rostrum, the sun came from behind threatening clouds and shined brightly throughout his short address.

Blackwood urged that the citizens of the state have patience with the building of Arkansas highways and bridges, declaring that the state has made more progress in this work during the past three years than ever before.

He explained the need of converting every bridge built in the state into a toll structure until after the span had been paid for, pointing out that without tolls the eight bridges now under construction could not be completed without seriously crippling the entire highway system of the state.

"Arkansas, jeered and poked at for its crude highways, now has one mile of state highway for every six sections of land, and is making strides forward just as big as any other state in the nation. Before many more years we will be grasping the top rung with the states who are now far ahead of us," the commissioner declared.

The speaker described the Fulton (Continued on page six)

Texas Tornado Kills 66

Lightning Kills Valuable Animal

TEXARKANA, May 7.—A bolt of lightning struck and killed a cow in a pasture near the end of East street last Friday.

On the face of it this story could end there but the livelihood of a family of seven depended to a great extent on the life of the animal.

The cow was the property of Claud Coursey a plasterer who has been out of work for several weeks. He and his wife have five young children.

They owned the one cow and Coursey had planted a garden. From the milk and butter and sale of garden produce they were able to get by, hoping for more prosperous eras in the business of plastering.

Then the clouds darkened Friday afternoon and the lightning started to flash through in one of the most severe electrical disturbances to be felt in this district in several years.

A forked flame darted to the earth near the Coursey home and the cow fell dead. With it went part of the livelihood of a family of seven.

The committee reported good progress today. With Mr. Smyth are the following men: Roy Anderson, W. C. Wellman, John P. Cox, R. M. Patterson, Frank Ward, Sid McMath and Garland Durkin.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP)—The senate foreign relations committee today decided to hold public hearings on the London naval treaty, beginning next Monday. Secretary Stimson who headed the American delegation to the London conference, will be the first witness to explain the agreement reached between the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

Melon Producers To Be Guests At C. C. Supper Here

Chamber To Discuss 1930 Festival With The Growers

FATE IS UNCERTAIN

Local Committee Named For Preliminary Work

Hempstead county watermelon producers will be invited to a supper some night next week by Hope Chamber of Commerce, in an effort to develop plans for the Fifth Annual Watermelon Festival—which to date remains very doubtful.

At its luncheon meeting today in Hotel Barlow the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce heard the refusal of the American Legion to assume the management of this year's festival. The Legion conducted the festival in 1928 and 1929, scoring notable successes both years; but the local post felt unequal to the task for a third year. Post Commander Barney Hamm reported today noon.

Ralph Rounton, president of the chamber, entertained a motion to authorize the Chamber of Commerce to invite local watermelon growers to supper here, after the fashion of recent dairy dinners held in this city; and there discuss the probable management of the 1930 festival.

In the meantime, Mr. Rounton has appointed a committee of six to draft the general outline to be followed by the festival, if actually staged this year. This committee comprises the following men:

Carter Johnson, C. C. Spragins, Wynne Denty, Roy Anderson, Terrell Cornelius and Barney Hamm.

The board of directors gave approval to the petition of the Missouri Pacific and Louisiana & Arkansas railroads for the right to rebuild under joint ownership part of the main line between Hope and New Orleans. Similar petitions are being sought from all cities along the line. The matter was presented for the railroads by William McComb, agricultural commissioner for the L. & A.

J. E. Critz, county agent, presided at the meeting. B. S. Burgess, secretary of the Mid-South Association; T. Roy Reid, University of Arkansas extension director, and J. E. McKell of the agricultural extension service, were other speakers.

$377,036,000 Is Recommended For Navy

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP)—All-far forecasting economy as a result of the London naval treaty, the house appropriation committee today recommended an outlay of $377,036,000 for naval establishment in the fiscal year 1931, which $57,365,000 will be expended for modernization and construction of war ships.

In reporting on the naval supply bill to the house committee, it was said that ratification of the London naval treaty would "curb the upward trend of our navy budget, and a huge sum will be saved, although the 1931 bill will not be greatly effected."

Before and After the Tornado Hit!

A MOMENT BEFORE—A cameraman for this newspaper and NEA Service risked his life to get this graphic closeup of the approach of a tornado that dealt death and destruction in the little town of Tekamah, Neb. Notice the funnel-shaped cloud approaching.

Large Acreage of Grass Is Promised

County Agent Recommends Sudan For Hot Weather Pasture

Over 100 acres of Sudan Grass was promised by farmers in various parts of the county as a result of the efforts of those working on the Sudan grass drive. Since this Sudan is to be planted for pasture only and since one fourth acre is recommended per cow this means if it is properly used it will care for 400 cows.

While Sudan according to County Agent Lynn Smith is not recommended for hay it is an excellent temporary hot weather pasture. This pasture hedges against a falling off of the milk supply during the months of August. Following are the business men and specialists who assisted on the campaign.

J. M. Harbin, Robert LaGrone, Jr., Clyde Monts, Mr. Sheffer, G. W. Ware, W. H. Woodley, Stanley Andrews, W. G. Amstein, Mr. McCombs, L. C. Summerville, Lynn Smith, Guy Stockday.

The agricultural committee of Hope Chamber of Commerce fostered the program.

Twister Takes A Heavy Death Toll In Southern Texas

Many Are Injured, Damage Is More Than $500,000

HITS IN ARKANSAS

Considerable Damage Is Done, No One Reported Killed

DALLAS, May 7.—(AP)—Sixty-six persons were killed, many were injured and property damage estimated at more than $500,000 was caused by a tornado which struck central and southern Texas late yesterday, a partial check revealed today.

The death list included 25 men and women and three children at Range. Seven white men, three women, four children and ten negroes were killed at Frost, Texas. Two persons were killed at Waco. A 15-year-old boy and a small child were killed when the storm struck at Ennes. Two white men and two negroes were killed at Bryan. Two were killed at San Antonio and two at Brown.

The twister which struck late yesterday took the greatest life toll at Frost, early central Texas, and at Range in south-central Texas. Force of the storm was felt in nearly all sections of the state.

Navarro, Hill, McClellan and Ellis counties in central Texas and Karnes in the southern part of the state, bore the brunt of the tornado. National Guards, firemen and volunteers were working in the debris at Frost where it is feared the death toll will increase when further checks are made of the storm's destruction.

Nearly every building in the little town of Frost was demolished, and many persons are without homes.

HOT SPRINGS, May 7.—(AP)—A severe wind storm which struck near here last night resulted in considerable damage to small buildings and farm houses in the vicinity of Mountain Pine. It was reported today. Trees were blown down and small buildings were damaged. No one was injured, according to the report. Presumably the same storm struck along Fork Creek, north of Jesseville in the Ouachita National forest, cutting a wide swath through the timber.

Ouachita Bridge Dedication Today

Number of Attractions Planned To Amuse Crowd

ARKADELPHIA, May 7.—Stunt flying by experienced air pilots parachute jumps, animal shows and a small carnival are among the feature attractions that have been arranged for the amusement of the huge crowd expected to assemble Wednesday for the formal dedication of the new concrete bridge over Ouachita river.

Practically every store in both Arkadelphia and Malvern has signed an agreement to close from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. for the celebration. Three bands will furnish music, including Ouachita College band and boys' bands from Arkadelphia and Malvern.

A thorough inspection of the picnic grounds has been made, and those in charge report that the location is ideal with plenty of shade, good water in abundance, large space for parking, no dust and one of the most beautiful views to be found on the Ouachita.

The feature of the air circus will be a parachute jump by Shorty Hines, of Memphis, who has made 972 successful leaps from flying planes. Wednesday, Hines will drop from a parachute soaring at an altitude of 5,000 feet and will fall 1,000 before opening his parachute.

The bridge spanning the Ouachita has been built after a fashion that conforms with the surroundings. It is made of a series of concrete arches the central span, lesser spans and approaches together being 117 feet in length. The bridge clears all high water both at the river and across the bottoms of the east bank, so that highway travel will be open the year round.

The minister's defense in part was that statements that a woman smokes are not libelous in this modern age.

Robinson and Caraway Vote Against Parker

N. C. Judge Misses Confirmation By A Two-Vote Margin

VOTE IS 41 TO 39

President May Not Turn To South For Next Choice

WASHINGTON, May 7.—

(AP)—The senate rejected Judge J. Parker as an associate justice of the supreme court today. The vote was 41 to 39. The North Carolina judge missed confirmation by only two vote margin after ten days of debate centered on his attitude on organized labor and the negro.

This is the first time a Supreme Court nomination has been rejected since 1894. The senate decision today leaves a vacant seat on the supreme court bench due to the death of the late Judge Sanford.

Standing firmly by his nominee, President Hoover gave no indication of his next choice. "Senators have expressed belief that the President will not turn to the south for a next choice."

Both Arkansas Senators, Robinson and Caraway voted against Parker's confirmation.

Lincoln Speaks At High School

Series of Talks Are Arranged By Kiwanis Club

"Students of Hope High School can win success in their future life through work and accurate service, with special emphasis upon work," stated L. R. Lincoln, division traffic inspector of Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas for the Postal Telegraph company, in an address on vocational guidance Thursday morning. This was the fifth of a series of talks which have been arranged by the Kiwanis club, to be given to the members of the junior and senior classes of the high school at their regular Wednesday assembly.

W. P. Harmon, in introducing the speaker called attention to the growth of communication since the days of the pony express. He also mentioned three certain means of transmitting information quickly; by telephone, telegraph and tell-allady.

Mr. Lincoln delivered one of the most practical talks which had been made in this series, according to those who heard him. He called attention to the fact that his company is seeking high school graduates who can give intelligent service, to train them in their Dallas school to operate the new printing telegraph instruments. These instruments are rapidly replacing telegraph operators all over the country. Student operators of these machines are given a free course in the Dallas company school. Messages are sent over these machines by typing them upon a telegraph typewriter. They are received without the aid of human hands. Four messages may be sent each way over four different machines, but over one wire, at the same time. Operators of these machines must know the touch system of operating a typewriter, and how to give ordinary maintenance service. Operators, either men or women, may earn from $40.00 to $150.00 a month. Special repair men and supervisors draw much larger salaries.

Women have an equal opportunity in this line of endeavor with men, stated Mr. Lincoln. Miss Pauline Gray, formerly of the local postal telegraph office is now pursuing a course in telegraph typewriter operation in Dallas. Miss Ester Dawkins is local manager of the Hope office. She is rendering competent service, according to Mr. Lincoln.

After graduation from high school, students have a license to find a suitable place for themselves in life, said Mr. Lincoln. Through accurate service and hard work, with a little intelligence, success is possible in any line of endeavor. Work, he said, meant more than the ordinary meaning of the term. The "W" stood for willingness to work, the "O" represented organization of the work to be done, "R" means regularity and "K" is the kick one gets out of work well done.

"I can't seem to place your face," said the plastic surgeon to the lady whose face he had difficulty in lifting.

Youth Arrested For Stolen Plane

Tells of Barnstorming Through Country and Abandoning Ship

SEARCY, May 7.—(AP)—After barnstorming through Texas, Louisiana, and parts of Mexico in a stolen airplane, three youths abandoned the ship in the marshes of Louisiana after a forced landing. Morris Carter, of Bald Knob told officers when arrested here today.

The two other youths, Chaplin Clark, who served as pilot of the stolen plane, and the third youth named Maddox left him in Louisiana, Carter said. The plane was stolen from a landing field here about two weeks ago. Carter was given a preliminary hearing at Bald Knob and ordered held for grand jury action under a $25,000 bond.

Clark had just completed a course in a flying school at Memphis shortly before he, Clark and Maddox are alleged to have stolen the airplane from a landing field here.

The Case of Luther Bones

FATHERS tell their small sons to beware of evil companions and evil places. It sounds pretty much like goblins-will-get-you-if-you-don't-watch-out. Sons don't always believe it. But listen to the case of Luther Bones:

Luther is a real person. He was an orphan, a likable, hard-working boy. He used to wrap papers in the mailing room of the El Dorado Daily News. And because he was an orphan, the management took unusual interest in him.

But Luther got out of bounds. He took to visiting barrel-houses which infested the country around El Dorado in the early days of the oil boom. He was a boy, hanging around whisky dives, which grown men were afraid of. The Daily News management caught up with him, and this writer's older partner talked to him like a Dutch uncle.

We never will forget what our partner told Luther. He said, "At your age, you're going to land in the penitentiary by the time you're a man."

Some time afterward, Luther was caught stealing cigarettes from a wholesale company's warehouse. His youth persuaded the police to give him another chance. It wasn't long before they wanted him for something else.

It has been five years since we heard of Luther Bones. But on our desk as we write this editorial lies a copy of the El Dorado Daily News. Down at the bottom of the front page under a small headline, we read:

"Arcadia, La., May 1.—Walker Robinson and Luther Bones, both formerly of El Dorado, were sentenced to 28 years in the penitentiary here today by Judge John I. Richardson in Bienville parish court. Robinson and Bones were convicted of burglary."

Just a newspaper man's little drama. We happened to know the actors, at the beginning, and at the end. If you were a newspaper man you'd believe in goblins.

Editorial Writers

Of course every literate and semi-literate adult can be a good newspaper reporter, editor or editorial writer. That is generally admitted by all Americans. So we have schools of journalism where the raw product is thrown into the hopper, the crank turned a few times and there slides out a finished literatus with a nose for news, an itch to save the world from itself and a conviction that he is the one who can save it.

These schools have professors and these professors always have a burning desire to keep up with the journalistic bandwagon so they send out questionnaires at intervals asking us who, what and why we are and how we get that way. The latest of these research documents comes to us from a big school of journalism and it asks more questions than could a grand jury with a liquor witness on the stand.

"Do you keep your clientele in mind while writing," is one question. Feature that! Yep. So do the other 989,899 writers whose only hope of selling their services lies in interesting the reader.

Here's another one: "Do your editorial writers systematically read books and special periodicals dealing with fields which their editorials cover?" Laugh that one off! No, what little we know about our subjects we got from sitting in the sunlight and absorbing it through our pores.

Another and the best one: "Do each of your editorial writers have a separate office?" Heaven help the purist! No, each of our editorial writers don't have a separate office. Furthermore, we have no editorial writers who went to no school of journalism which taught no such grammar.

The question reminds one of our editors of that great classic of the English language as she wrote: "What did you bring that book to me to be read to out of from for?"—Arkansas Democrat.

Opportunity calls but its voice is hard to hear over the yelling "Gimme."

"Somebody remarks that writers don't have to go far from home to get their material." That's where a lot of them get material for a world survey of economic conditions.

There's Always Room For One More!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—As white-haired Mother Jones prepared to spend her hundredth birthday on May 1 in what probably is her deathbed at a farmhouse near the capital, other old-time labor leaders recalled anecdotes of her vivid career which illustrated the old lady's flaming spirit, her unflinching wit and her resourcefulness. Mother Jones herself used to enjoy telling them and they can hardly be done justice except in her own rich brogue.

MOTHER'S favorite concerned the time she "blew up the bull." It was after coal strikes in West Virginia. The miners had gained political control of a town of 2000 or 3000 souls and there was factional strife among them, so they sent for Mother Jones to come and settle it. It was early in January. Thirty or forty miles away someone spotted Mother on the train and wired ahead. A private detective in the employ of the miners—a "bull" that is—boarded the train at the next station and trailed her. He followed her to the little hotel at her destination and engaged the room alongside hers.

This hotel had its office in a bar-room downstairs and about a dozen rooms on the only other floor, the second. It had old-fashioned transoms and by listening through hers Mother Jones followed the movements of "the bull." At first he stuck close, all set to trail Mother wherever she went. But he grew tired, went in and laid down on his own bed and soon she heard him snoring.

At that point she tiptoed out, down and across the street to the general store. She told the clerk her little nephew up north didn't believe people exploded fireworks at Christmas time and she wished she could send him some fireworks just to prove it. Maybe the clerk had a few firecrackers still left over from Christmas. So the clerk searched and finally found four small packages of little crackers and six large cannon crackers.

The "bull" was still snoring. Mother opened the four packages of little ones, and tied them together, making a long fuse. She put a chair in front of the door of the "bull" and mounted it with the crackers and two matches. First she laid the six big ones out on a row on the ledge of the transom. Rapidly she lit the four packages, dropped them on the floor and ran a lighted match along the fuses of the cannon crackers. Then she dashed back and under her own covers.

The explosion sent the "bull" jumping through the window into an eight-foot snow bank. There, according to Mother, he kept yelling "Good God, I'm killed!" until he pulled him out. Meanwhile Mother herself was striding down to the office demanding: "Is this a decent house or isn't it? What's all this noise mean?"

Then there was the time she got into Denver with a mission and was met by a lieutenant of militia with orders to take her in custody to a hotel. She suggested the best hotel in town and got it. Then she wanted to eat.

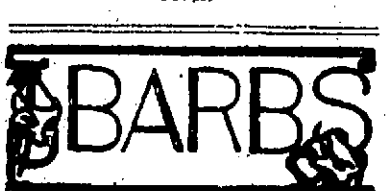

"Who's paying for this meal?" she demanded and the lieutenant twice assured her that the cats were on the State of Colorado.

Mother promptly ordered the entire bill of fare. It took six trays to bring it in.

Encouraged, eh? The world looks dark. All your hopes have gone astray; your finest shots have missed the mark. Are heart-sick and discouraged, eh? Be heart! Each morning start anew, run unto the battle line; for greater odds than you men have fought with courage he.

You, now blinded by despair—sick and weary of the fight, every hand beset by care. If you will, attain the light.

Reinstatement of Schmeling Halted

New York Commission Seeks to Tie Up German Boxer

NEW YORK, May 7.—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight champion contender, was not reinstated Tuesday by the New York state Athletic Commission for two seasons. In the first place he neglected the formality of making out a stock application for reinstatement, and in the second and all other places he balked at signing a very shrewdly prepared set of conditions which would give the commission a stranglehold on his future ring activities up to October 15, should he whip Jack Sharkey for the championship here on June 12.

highway commission, representing the Magnolia agricultural district of which Miller and Hempstead counties are a part, followed Blackwood with an address in which he pointed to the hectic career through which the highway commission has passed in renouncing its present stage.

Winham Speaks
Allen Winham, representative in the Arkansas legislature from Miller county, followed Mathews with a brief response to the dedicatory address delivered by Blackwood.

"This is an occasion of thanksgiving in which all the old animosities of the past should be forgotten. All of us, it makes no difference on which side we stood before the completion of this great bridge, should forgive one another and go forward together," Winham said in describing the many problems encountered before the bridge had been completed.

McFaddin Gives History
In the beginning E. P. McFaddin recounted the history of Red river at Fulton, relating the early history of the crossing and describing its embryonic stage in which it was the boundary line between Arkansas and later the boundary line between the United States and the Republic of Texas.

"Miller county was disputed territory for generations, and Fulton was the terminus for old military roads that led to the west. Boats came to Fulton from New Orleans, bringing food and hardware; and boats from Fulton carried agricultural products to New Orleans.

"River traffic became less and less prominent after the inauguration of the Fulton and Cairo railroad. Then the river, once our only means for trade, became a barrier between the people of one section and the people of another.

"As traffic became heavier to and from these two sections, a ferry was established here. For generations it was the only means of crossing.

"During the past 30 years, from the advent of automobiles, traffic has been completely revolutionized, the building of highways and bridges, one of which we come to dedicate today.

"The inevitable march of progress, and the main artery of traffic which crosses this bridge is just as much a reason for our celebration as the bridge itself."

McFaddin introduced M. E. Melton, secretary of the Texarkana Chamber of Commerce, as "one who has labored hard and long for this project." He commended Congressman Tilman B. Parker, who was not present, for work he did in obtaining the bridge as well as many others, citizens of Miller and Hempstead counties.

Rev. O. J. Wade, pastor of the Beech Street Baptist church in Texarkana, delivered the invocation. Joe Berryman's Texarkana, Texas, high school band and the Hope Boys' band supplied music during the afternoon. The Hope band played the Star Spangled Banner at the close of the ceremonies.

Following the dedication, the crowd filed to the main bridge structure to view motor boat races, which were sponsored by the Texarkana Merchants Bureau.

Ruler Will Get Costly Automobile

White and Gold, Bejeweled Car Built By U. S. Concern

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 7.—When Riza Khan, Shah of Persia, appears in state hereafter he will be driven past his admiring people in a magnificent bejeweled white and gold automobile, believed to be the costliest in the world.

This automobile, now on its way to Persia, was built especially for the Shah by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company of this city. It was created as a parade car for public ceremonies. The car itself cost $18,500, but the lavish addition of diamonds and other costly jewels furnished by the Shah himself is said to raise the price of the finished product far above that of any other automobile made.

Everything in the car has been built solely with an eye to the Persian ruler's requirements. Only the chassis of standard Pierce-Arrow manufacture. This has a 144-inch wheelbase and carries a straight eight engine of 132 horsepower.

Outside of this everything, even the tires, is custom built. The coach work particularly represents the finest in luxury. The exterior—a regular town car model—is of pure white, enriched by stripings of gold and by the heavy gold-plated metal work on fender headlamps, door latches, radiator shell, windshield frame, bumpers and even the inlaid metal stripings on the thick rubber running boards.

Royal Crown Outside
Emblazoned on both doors, and set up in front of each fender, is a gold replica of the Persian royal crown.

Sheriff Averts Jail Delivery at Paragould

PARAGOULD, May 7.—(P)—Fourteen prisoners in the Greene county jail, were in the "cage" today as a result of a discovery of five saws and a large hole sawed in one of the rear windows of the jail. Sheriff on Waldron and his son Joe made the discovery last night. The sheriff said a break for freedom was planned by the prisoners for later in the night. The discovery resulted when the sheriff heard a sawing noise in a section of the jail, and went to investigate.

George W. Robinson and Charles Westernman spent this afternoon in Prescott, where Mr. Robinson was looking after his business interests in that city.

King's Rise To Fame Thrills Fans

Glamorous Youth For-takes Stage for Screen Romances

Dennis King, who for the past two years has been rated by critics as the greatest singing star of the Broadway musical comedy stage, will be seen and heard for the first time by movie audiences at the Saenger theatre. "The Vagabond King" opens today for a three-day run.

"The Vagabond King" was the vehicle for Dennis King's greatest singing achievement. It had a sensational long run of more than a full season in New York and made an impressive tour in other cities afterward.

King's rise to fame was meteoric. As a lad he was fascinated by the stage. His first bit parts were with John Drinkwater's repertory theatre in Birmingham, England. He came to the United States in the English company of "Monsieur Gaultier" after he was wounded in service in the British Expeditionary forces.

Later he played in Jane Cowl's New York company of "Romeo and Juliet," achieving great fame in the role of Mercutio.

His friends persuaded him to develop his singing voice, and this brought him an engagement in Rose Marie, which established him as a leader in romantic singing roles. Then came the sensational and glamorous "The Vagabond King."

The music for "The Vagabond King" was written by Rudolph Friml whose long and successful career as a composer began in 1912 with "The Firefly." Other musical comedies and operettas which he has written music for are "Katinka," "Sometime," "Rose Marie" and "The Three Musketeers." The thrilling Friml songs of the original production have been carried to the all-talking screen in Paramount's gorgeous all-color screen version of "The Vagabond King."

Mother, Brother and Sister Re-united After 33 Years

CALUMET, Mich., May 7.—George Boyle, his sister, Flossie, and their mother, have been reunited through a photograph taken here 33 years ago. After the picture was taken, the three members of the family literally scattered to the four winds.

Many years ago when Boyle's father was killed here, George was adopted by Mrs. George Stevens, Calumet. Flossie was taken into the home of Mrs. Floyd Clink. At the same time, the brother and sister were photographed together. The mother kept a copy of the picture and took it with her when she left Calumet for Canada.

Shortly afterward, the Clink family also left Calumet and the family was separated thus until recently.

A short time ago Mrs. Stevens received a letter from C. W. Boyle, Edmonton, Alta., informing her that the mother of the two children was his sister-in-law, that she was staying with him and desired news of her children.

Mrs. Stevens wrote George Boyle at Neagunee, Mich., sending him the photograph which their mother had kept since the family's separation and which C. W. Boyle had sent to Mrs. Stevens. George Boyle then tried for several months to find his sister, but failed.

Meanwhile a story of the separation, and a copy of the photograph together with an account of George's search for Flossie was printed in a Toledo newspaper and was seen by a former Calumet resident. This man knew and communicated with the Clink family in Ohio and brother and sister were reunited. Shortly afterward they were joined by their mother.

structure as one of the most magnificent structures in the country, pointing to its cost of approximately $900,000 and the part that it will play in the future.

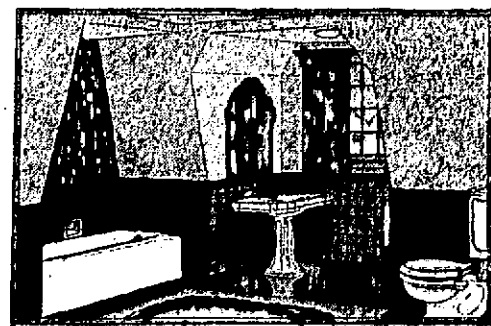

"I am elated to be here at the final move in the completion of the bridge and to be a part in this historical celebration. I am glad to be among the men who so ably assisted us from the beginning, and want to assure you that without the assistance of both the Texarkana Chamber of Commerce, the Hope Chamber of Commerce and individuals in both cities that the commission could never have carried this bridge to completion."
